RF Industries Named to Forbes “100 Best Small Companies” List

San Diego, California, October 15, 2013 – RF Industries, Ltd. (NASDAQ: RFIL) today announced that it was ranked No. 46 on the Forbes 100 Best Small Companies in America. The list can be accessed online at <http://www.forbes.com/best-small-companies/list/>.

To qualify for the Forbes Best Small Companies List, companies must have sales between $5 million and $1 billion, a stock price no lower than $5, and be publicly traded for at least one year. Rankings are based on earnings growth, sales growth and return on equity in the past 12 months and over five years. Additionally, Forbes compares the stock performance of each company with that of its peers. The list excludes financial institutions, REITs, utilities and limited partnerships.

Howard Hill, Chief Executive Officer, commented, “We are pleased to have been included in the Forbes ‘America’s 100 Best Small Companies’ list this year. RF has been included in the ‘Best Small Companies List’ three times previously and we are grateful that Forbes has again recognized the strength of our business and the commitment and hard work of our management and employees. We look forward to upholding this honor by continuing to provide and develop innovative high quality custom connectivity products and solutions to our customers.”
